

COAM Colour Walk!

Here at COAM we think that you can see colour everywhere, so long as you look close enough. Going on a walk and trying to spot lots of different colours is a great way to start noticing things you may have never noticed before. These 'colour walks' could be around urban areas or around a local woodland or open space. The photos we have taken come from our site as well as walks around our local areas whilst working from home.

You will need:

- An open space or area
- A camera or camera phone
- An adult to help you

What to do?

Simply take time to walk around your chosen area and look for anything that is colourful and stands out to you. Whilst you are walking you could think of the colours of the rainbow to give you a prompt about which colours to look out for. Or you could look out for things that are your favourite colour. As you start to focus on a colour you'll be amazed at the different things you will see!

Here are some of the things we saw on our walks:

A red telephone box

Some orange rope

Blue sky

Brown tiles

Green moss

A bright purple flower

Grey sky!

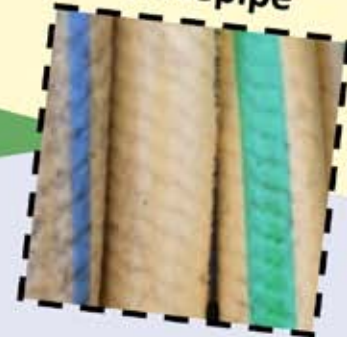

Two white/cream mushrooms

The underside of a very pink leaf

Some yellow hosepipe

Your photos could be of natural or manmade things, they could be as big as a house or as small as an ant. Remember to look up and down and all around in your search for colourful things!

Make sure you always stay safe as you are exploring and watch out for any hazards.

On the next page we will show you our rainbow collage!

We made this collage using a computer but you could print your photographs out instead and stick them down onto paper. There are lots of different ways to use your photographs, maybe you could use them to create a map to show the route your walk took. What other ideas for using your photos can you think of?

We can't wait to see what you create with your colourful photos! Make sure to tag us in any creations
